ArtConnections Gallery in Winston-Salem, NC, Offers Works by Carol Engler

ArtConnections Gallery in Winston-Salem, NC, will present an exhibit of works by Carol Engler, on view from Apr. 6 - 16, 2018. A reception will be held on Apr. 6, from 7-9pm.

Living in New York City and on a farm called Horseshoe in NC has given Engler an extraordinary and colorful experience with nature, animals, and the city life. People, animals, and family scenes are her favorite subjects. Engler says "I never tire of watching people interact in airports, theaters, beaches and cities." The Art Student League of New York, under the tutelage of John Groth (illustrator, artist, and war correspondent) provided Engler with perspective and creative focus.

Engler's style is expressionist and representational. She paints in oils, acrylics and watercolors. Her paintings have been presented in several galleries in NC, including: Anthem in Black Mountain, Art and Soul in Mebane, Uptown Gallery in Mount Airy, Apple Gallery in Danbury, and Panazella in Carrboro.

The Burroughs-Chapin Art Museum in Myrtle Beach, SC, Features Works by Phil La Borie

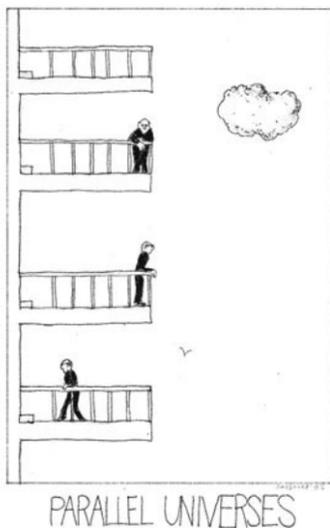

The Franklin G. Burroughs-Simeon B. Chapin Art Museum, Myrtle Beach, SC, is presenting Phil La Borie: Apparent Realities, explores these questions and other possibilities through whimsical drawings and intriguing cartoons, on view through Apr. 22, 2018.

A double take is a classic move in TV and film comedies. It's also the response evoked by many of artist Phil La Borie's creations, which ask, "What is actually real? What do we think is real? Does it matter?"

A resident of Garden City, SC, La Borie's career as an illustrator, artist and writer spans more than 50 years. Commenting on the 40-plus works included in the exhibition, he says he first became interested in the topic of apparent realities when he learned about an argument between 18th-century philosopher Bishop George Berkeley and essayist Dr. Samuel Johnson. Berkeley claimed that reality, including physical objects, exists solely in our minds; Johnson countered that reality is based on our experience of the external world. Ever since that discovery, La Borie says, he has pondered this debate and translated it into art.

A graduate of the San Francisco Art Institute, La Borie spent much of his career as a copywriter and creative director in the advertising industry, working at agencies in Philadelphia, San Francisco, Toronto, Vancouver and Westport, CT. He has worked full-time as an artist for the past 10 years in a variety of media, including oils, magic marker and collage. With Apparent Realities, he has returned to his original love of drawing.

Apparent Realities appears concurrently with William H. Miller: What You See Is What You Get; Steven Bleicher: The
